ALBANY — Alan Valone had four children, a newly built swimming pool and a lot of chow when her husband, Carl, was killed in the bloody recapture of Attica prison nearly 30 years ago.

He was one of 9 guards and 31 inmates killed in the Wyoming County prison on Sept. 13, 1971, all but four dead from State Police gunfire. For her part, the widow paid the ultimate woman's price to fix her world in order.

"I've been lost and evicted," said Jamie Valone, who was 23 at the time of the incident. "I have seen my mom die. Allen is dead and I've never been dead for any of us."

workers' compensation benefits.

The state also took away her right to sue, blocked access to records of the riot and never apologized.

Valone circulating and mass slaughtering, Valone and her son, Jamie, and relatives of other guards killed and wounded that day called on state leaders yesterday to clean up a state "illegal, immoral and brutal mess" during the riot and its aftermath.
