

Landscape, looking from rear of Marshall's Mill toward Fay Mtn., and showing symmetrical Elm

The scene from Marshall's Mill in the town of Lewis, N.Y., looking west towards Little Fay Mountain in the Adirondacks. A body of water, perhaps Big Pond, sits to the right of the image. In the center-left of the image is a single elm, bare in the winter but growing straight and healthy. This photograph was taken to record the trees of New York State.
