

Laying in a wood supply for winter. French Vosges near Oserardner

View of a man collecting wood by a stream for the winter months in the Vosges Mountains of France, near a place called Oserardner. Two buildings can be seen in the background, one is probably the man's house and the other a storage space or barn. This image was probably created to record the forestry-related activities of the New York State Forest, Fish, and Game Commission.
