

Statement describing land forfeited in Dutchess County, 1807

To Simeon DeWitt Esq. Surveyor General of the State of New York

You will please to take notice that I have discovered that an undivided half part of a certain tract of land containing approximately in the form of a right triangle, granted to William Livingston by the first Congress of the United States, was confiscated to the People of the State by the attainder of Robert Leake, who at the time of his attainder was seized in fee of the same - and for the purpose of full effect, the advantages allowed me by law

Albany 26 June 1807

Robert Griffith

Statement to Simeon DeWitt, New York State Surveyor General, of a discovery of unsold forfeited land in Poughkeepsie, Dutchess County, submitted by Robert Griffith. These lands were forfeited by the attainder of Robert Leake after the American Revolution.
