

Pheasants, 4-H Club

View of a New York State game protector examining a ring-necked pheasant (Phasianus colichus) chick raised by a 4-H club for release into the wild. The young woman is presumably a member of the club, which may be the Rensselaer County chapter. The date is unrecorded, but may be July 1931. Pheasants are indigenous to Asia. This image was created to record the game-related activities of the New York State Conservation Department.
