

Jailhouse Lawyer Reveals at 'Victory' in Attica Trial

Trial: TV movie on exploits still earns inmate 7 percent of video rentals, sales

Continued from Page C1

Rosenberg's testimony, given last fall, is central to the trial. The former said that after the police shooting of Attica, he worked several years, including the one for the last 10 years, for the state. He said, "I did not do anything to help the trial."

"I heard that you were going to be a lawyer," Rosenberg said.

He said that he came to the cell, worked in the yard and worked in the kitchen with a heavy piece of wood.

Rosenberg, who is serving a life term for killing two police officers in Attica, is a 1962 graduate of the State Bar of New York. He is a member of the bar and is a member of the American Bar Association.

Originally sentenced to die in the electric chair, Rosenberg, who is 50, was sentenced to life in prison. Rosenberg, who is a member of the bar, is a member of the American Bar Association.

Originally sentenced to die in the electric chair, Rosenberg, who is 50, was sentenced to life in prison. Rosenberg, who is a member of the bar, is a member of the American Bar Association.

Originally sentenced to die in the electric chair, Rosenberg, who is 50, was sentenced to life in prison. Rosenberg, who is a member of the bar, is a member of the American Bar Association.

Originally sentenced to die in the electric chair, Rosenberg, who is 50, was sentenced to life in prison. Rosenberg, who is a member of the bar, is a member of the American Bar Association.

"I got shot in the knee, broken up with a tommy gun until my hand was cracked open and hit in the face with a chain. This trial is a message to New York State — don't treat prisoners like that again."

— Jerome Rosenberg

He was one of the defendants of the 1971 riot at Attica, and the legal battle that led to the state's verdict was a 20-year ordeal.

One of the conditions placed upon the state was that the state should not pay the costs of Rosenberg's defense.

He appealed the state's decision to pay for his defense, and the state agreed to pay for his defense.

He appealed the state's decision to pay for his defense, and the state agreed to pay for his defense.

He appealed the state's decision to pay for his defense, and the state agreed to pay for his defense.

He is currently in prison for the murder of two police officers and is expected to be a life term.

"I'm never giving up," he said. Although Rosenberg said he is committed to the justice system, he said that the state's actions were not fair to the public.

"We also see Rosenberg's testimony as a message to the state that the state should not pay for the defense of prisoners like that again."

— Jerome Rosenberg

He was one of the defendants of the 1971 riot at Attica, and the legal battle that led to the state's verdict was a 20-year ordeal.

One of the conditions placed upon the state was that the state should not pay the costs of Rosenberg's defense.

He appealed the state's decision to pay for his defense, and the state agreed to pay for his defense.

He appealed the state's decision to pay for his defense, and the state agreed to pay for his defense.

He appealed the state's decision to pay for his defense, and the state agreed to pay for his defense.

Continuation of a newspaper article appearing in the February 8, 1992 issue of The Buffalo News discussing Jerome Rosenberg and his role in the Attica liability trial resulting in the verdict against Karl Pfeil.

Identifier

NYSA_W0100-21_00016202

Source

"New York State Department of Law special investigation files relating to the Attica uprising, circa 1971-2001. W0100-21."

Rights

This record is not part of the New York State Archives' collection and is presented on our project partner's behalf for educational use only. Please contact the home repository for information on copyright and reproductions.

More From This Series

Department of Law special investigation files relating to the Attica uprising